The picture above is Palmerston Street in 1908. You can find it again and read a little about it on the link below.

It is indeed a short walk into Romsey town centre - which is also referred to as Romsey Infra. The outer areas of the town are now referred to as Romsey Extra - the town has grown considerably since those early years.

To the left is a copy from Ancestry.co.uk page regarding a Phillipa Sillence. The parents and address details are similar to those you have given, but as you can see the other people in the house do not include the additional names you have mentioned.

I cannot find any reference to a Bertha Emily Sillence in between the years 1881 and 1921. Indeed there are only two other people with the surname, Sillence during those years - one in Bournemouth and one in the Isle of Wight - all in the Hampshire area which is a large county, but none of the other family details tally at all with those you mention.

On the next page the image is the original of the official page you see here on the left.

If you would like me to put this information, including your email on my Romseynet Genealogy page then do please let me know. I would also need to apply your email address should anyone wish to make contact so I need your permission for that too.
